We provide Shortcode SMS access to premium rate services of third party content providers. Such content may include, but is not limited to, ringtones, logos, voting on television programs, text chat and general information services (e.g. cricket result updates).

In accessing these services using Shortcode SMS You may be requesting a one-off service, or subscribing for an ongoing service with a commitment to receive chargeable content. We provide the means of access through the Shortcode SMS, but We are not responsible for and accept no liability for any content that You access using the service. We require the third party content providers to abide by the Phonepay Plus (the UK regulator of premium rate services) Code of Practice. Further information can be obtained on the Phonepay Plus web site at <http://www.phonepayplus.org.uk/>.

Under the Code of Practice subscription services must be clearly advertised stating all charges for the service. We will bill You for any chargeable SMS You send or receive (or Your pay as you go balance will be reduced by the values of the charge), but there may also be subscription charges payable directly to the third party content provider. If You want to cease a Shortcode SMS service You can send STOP at any time to the relevant shortcode

If You are not satisfied with the outcome You can contact Phonepay Plus. If the third party content provider is found to be in breach of the Phonepay Plus Code of Practice they may have their service suspended or terminated and can be fined.

Some third parties provide adult content on their Shortcode SMS services. You must be 18 years or over to access such content. It is the responsibility of the post pay account holder (which will be a parent or guardian in the case of a mobile user that is under 18) to ensure that persons under 18 do not use the handset to access such services

Charges for texts sent or received via Shortcode SMS are set by the third party content provider and may be high as these are premium rate services. Some downloads can cost £5.00 or more. It is Your responsibility to pay any outstanding balance on Your post pay mobile account (in the case of pay as you go mobile You will only be able to send or receive a chargeable SMS if You have sufficient money in your prepay balance or unused Inclusive Texts). A chargeable SMS will be charged for if it is sent, irrespective of whether it is delivered or not.
